

WORKSHOP

Lice on the web: a workshop on the new Phthiraptera website

Vincent S SMITH

Natural History Museum, Cromwell Road, London, UK.

This is a practical workshop on the new community website for louse research community (<http://phthiraptera.myspecies.info/>) based on the Scratchpad system (<http://scratchpads.eu/>). The focus of the workshop is on adding various kinds of data, generating taxon pages and using the site to communicate with other members of the louse research community. The goal is to provide hands on experience so you can independently explore and add content to the site after the event. Topics will cover basic features, literature, locations and specimens, image gallery and images, forums, and getting further support. Attendance by anyone willing to contribute to community efforts in online louse research is especially encouraged. Wireless facilities permitting, attendees will be able to gain practical experience logging in and contributing to the site during the workshop.
<vince@vsmith.info>